Going to Summer School?

procedure, remedial and child guidance techniques, which can be applied directly to classroom problems. The program is based upon the developmental needs of children. The faculty is composed of experts in the various phases of early childhood education.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE OF DRAMA AND RADIO, Chicago, Illinois, announces a six-week summer term including both day and evening classes opening June 23. Special practical courses for teachers in the field of radio and stage are offered. These courses are so designed as to give the teacher—during the six-week period—a practical working knowledge in the field of radio: the writing of scripts, adaptation of stories for scripts, production of radio programs, microphone technique, story telling, announcing, narrating, speech, etc. Courses in various phases of stage acting and directing are offered. Active participation in practical projects is the method of instruction. Promotional credits from Columbia College of Drama and Radio are acceptable by the Chicago Board of Education.

THE OPEN ROAD.—A series of field studies is being arranged by The Open Road, a nonprofit organization which has as its object the promotion of international and interregional understanding. Each field trip is sponsored by an educational institution. Groups are small. Academic credit is available to those who want it. The courses generally run five to six weeks. Fees cover tuition, living and travel and are based on net costs. In the 1941 series are included:

"Southern Conditions," sponsored by Teachers College, Columbia University. An intensive study of a southern county which is partly industrial, partly agricultural. Here one meets mountain whites, Negroes, plantation owners, tenant farmers, sharecroppers, mill operators, factory workers and small-town citizens.

"Minority Cultures of Colorado and New Mexico," sponsored by the University of Denver. A study of the values and customs of groups which have conserved their identity and of their relations to the dominant American culture: Volga German farmers, Japanese farmers, Mexican agricultural laborers, Spanish Americans of New Mexico, Pueblo Indians and Navajo Indians.

"Life Problems of the Great Plains and the Rocky Mountains," sponsored by Colorado State College of Education. A study of five small communities: a cattle and sheep ranching area; an irrigated farming area; a Dust Bowl village; a coal-mining town; a historic gold-mining camp.

"Planned Regional Development as Exemplified by the T.V.A.," sponsored by the University of Tennessee and Northwestern University, with the co-operation of the T.V.A. A study of the tremendous T.V.A. development and its effect on the lives of the Valley people in towns and on the land.

"Community Relations in Connecticut and Pennsylvania," sponsored by the Connecticut State Summer Session. A contrasting study of life in a Pennsylvania coal town and a Connecticut manufacturing center.

Particulars regarding these and other field courses may be obtained from The Open Road, 8 West 40th Street, New York.
